

Local gallery owner named programmer for BC Culture Days

BC is buzzing with cultural activity and 2011 promises to be the year of cultural celebrations! With the ever evocative PuSh Festival starting off the revelry in January, this weekend's Olympic anniversary and Spirit Festivals for the rest of February, Arts & Culture Week in April, the months just keep filling up! Planning for the summer months is well under way with the 10th Anniversary of the BCCC and the official launch of the BC Culture Days announced in January.

Recently Record journalist Julie MacLellan reported Trudy Van Dop, the publisher of the Arts & Cultural Guide to BC, and Van Dop & Associate's role in these celebrations:

“A New Westminster gallery owner has been announced as the programmer of the 2011 BC Culture Days. Trudy Van Dop will take on the role for this year's celebration of the arts, which will happen Sept. 30 and Oct. 1 and 2... and this year, the effort will be coordinated across the province.

Kevin Dale McKeown, the Alliance for Arts and Culture's director of communications, will serve as the BC coordinator.

Trudy said the province wide celebration will be a positive one.

“Culture Days is an exciting way for us to build on existing relationships and create new connections with our audiences and communities,” she said in a press release. “I see this as an opportunity for us to rally together over the long term for the health and stability of our sector, as well as to showcase the invaluable contribution artists and creators make to our province, our culturally diverse communities, and to all our citizens.”
