Just 20 minutes from downtown Vancouver and the Vancouver International Airport, the Museum of Anthropology, located at the University of British Columbia, houses one of the world's finest displays of Northwest Coast First Nations art in a spectacular Arthur Erickson-designed building overlooking mountains and sea. Inside the soaring glass and concrete structure of MOA's Great Hall, see magnificent totem poles, weavings and contemporary artworks. Admire the world's largest collection of works by Northwest Coast artist Bill Reid, including his famous cedar sculpture The Raven and the First Men, and see the world's largest collection of Northwest Coast First Nations art. The museum also features over 9,000 objects from around the world are displayed. The museum is a must-visit for anyone interested in Indigenous art and design. Enjoy a wide range of programs and events throughout the year. For an expert...
